INTRODUCTORY

1. The Government of India decided to obtain village-wise language data for all the multi-lingual taluks in India by means of a special sorting of the 1951 Census slips. Travancore-Cochin Government agreed to share with the Central Government, the cost on a 50 : 50 basis. I was appointed Superintendent of Census for this work in addition to my normal duties as Professor of Statistics in the University.

A study of the language tables for the State shows that the following taluks are bi-lingual.

- i. Agastheeswaram
- ii. Thovala
- iii. Kalkulam
- iv. Vilavancode
- v. Shenkotta
- vi. Peermade
- vii. Devikulam
- viii. Chittur.

The first four taluks are contiguous to one another and the bordering taluk of Neyyattinkara in the north has a small section of Tamil speaking population. As such this taluk was also selected for sorting.

The selection of taluks was made on the basis of the figures for mother-tongue collected for the census tracts at the 1951 census and also local knowledge.

2. At the 1951 Census, the census unit in rural areas was the Kara or village; in cities and municipalities it was the ward. A few non-municipal towns (places declared to be towns for the purpose of the census) were also treated as separate units. At the tabulation stage, however, data on two points alone (population, sex-wise and the distribution of the population in the eight livelihood classifications) were collected for each census unit. All the other data were compiled only at the 'tract' level. The tracts were formed by the grouping together of census units into larger units intended to facilitate the compilation and tabulation of census data. Each district was divided into a number of tracts and the urban areas of a district were kept separate from rural areas. The urban area was divided into municipal towns and non-municipal towns. Cities, if any, were treated as separate tracts.

3. At the time of tabulation, a ten percent sample of the census enumeration slips were taken and some of the population tables were prepared only on the basis of this 10 percent sample. The enumeration slips thus fell into three categories—the ten percent sample slips, the remaining 90 percent slips and slips relating to displaced persons. Owing to the lack of accommodation for the proper storage of all census slips, only the 10 percent sample slips and the slips of displaced persons were preserved. The census records together with these slips were handed over to the Board of Revenue for safe custody under orders of Government. Data regarding mother tongue and birth place, presented in Tables I and II respectively, have been compiled from these 10 percent sample slips.

As soon as the staff for language sorting was appointed, I got the boxes containing the sample slips, transferred to my office, from the Office of the Board of Revenue, where they were being kept. The slips for each tract had been grouped into the various livelihood classifications and kept in separate bundles. As more than one of the taluks selected for language sorting were comprised in the tracts concerned, the first item of work was to reclassify the slips into taluks, using the location code number.

Next, the slips of each taluk were reclassified into the various pakuthies, or administrative sub-divisions of taluks, each of which comprised a number of karas or villages. (For Chittur Taluk, the administrative sub-division of the taluk was the village itself). It was not considered necessary to gather separate figures for non-municipal towns, as it was virtually impossible to demarcate their boundaries on revenue or other maps.

Malayalam and Tamil are the principal languages in this State. Slips relating to persons speaking Malayalam and Tamil in each pakuthy were sorted out and kept separate. Slips in respect of persons speaking languages other than these were also kept separate; they were however few. A complete check of this sorting was carried out by compiler checkers and the Technical Assistant. A percentage of the work was also over-checked by my Personal Assistant.

Table II—Birth place—reflects a feature peculiar to the language distribution of this State. In some of the bilingual taluks, the majority language happens to be Tamil because of the influx of a large number of Tamil-speaking workers from the adjacent districts of Madras State. It was therefore felt that in addition to the table on mother-tongue a separate table on birth place should be compiled for this State. This table will, it is hoped, help the assessment of the problem of language distribution in this State in its proper perspective.

The taluk maps included in this brochure show the location of the villages, their census code numbers and the percentages of speakers of the two principal languages to the total population.

The data presented in the tables are based on 10 percent sample slips. The proportions are therefore only estimates of the true values. When the population size in the village is small, the sample will also be small; consequently the sampling errors in the proportions will be high. In particular, the villages bordering forest areas and hills, are thinly populated and as such, the proportions should be used with caution.
