CENSUS

OF

Rajputana and Ajmer-Merwara 1931.

ADMINISTRATIVE VOLUME.

CHAPTER I.

Enumeration.

1. This volume is intended solely for the guidance of those in whose hands the direction of the next Census Operations in Rajputana and Ajmer-Mewara will lie. Opening remarks.

At the request of the Government of India, the Hon'ble the Agent to the Governor-General, Rajputana, informed the States in November, 1929, that a Census would be taken in the spring of 1931 and asked them to co-operate.

It would be a convenience to all concerned if in future this communication could also suggest the bringing up to date of the General Village Register of the previous Census and the appointment of State Census Superintendents. On this occasion this was not done till March 1930.

Although I had heard unofficially that I was likely to be appointed as Superintendent of the Census Operations some months previously, I did not receive definite orders till early in March 1930 and assumed charge on 1st. April 1930 without knowing what my pay was going to be. When this was subsequently communicated, it was found to be much less than I was led to anticipate. My first official letter therefore contained a request that it might be raised. After considerable delay it was finally fixed at a consolidated scale of Rs. 1,800.

As in 1921, headquarters were located at Ajmer—a most convenient centre for touring to every part of Rajputana. The Office was located in the empty upper storey of my residence and Rs. 75 was the not unreasonable rent charged for it by the landlord.

The establishment throughout this stage consisted of the following:—

1. Deputy Superintendent.... Pay—Rs. 250-20-310 (scale revised from 16th. October 1930 to Rs. 270-20-310).
1. Head Clerk. Pay—Rs. 200-10-220.
1. Second Clerk. Pay—Rs. 120-10-150.
1. Third Clerk Pay—Rs. 75.
1. Daftari Pay—Rs. 20 (Pay revised from 1st. September 1930 to Rs. 22-1-24).
1. Farrash. Pay—Rs. 15.
4. Chaprasis. Pay—Rs. 18 each.

The Sweeper and Chaukidar were part time men and received allowances of Rs. 5 and 3 respectively.

The records of the 1921 Census were taken over from the Agency Office at Abu and were found to be in a good state of preservation and were invaluable for purposes of reference in the early stages.

The first thing that a Superintendent should do is to get into touch with the various States and satisfy himself that a Census Superintendent has been appointed in each, and that the preparation of a General Village Register has been commenced. The next thing is to prepare a brief note describing in general terms the various stages right up to the end of the Final Enumeration and to have it translated and issued in sufficient numbers so that each charge Superintendent may have a copy.

A Census Code was drafted and issued Chapter by Chapter as soon as the corresponding Chapters of the Imperial Code had been received.

I am of opinion that it would be preferable in future not to have a separate Provincial Code but to issue to all concerned the Imperial Code in toto together with Subsidiary Instructions to each Chapter in amplification or modification to suit local conditions.

Manuals for Charge Superintendents and Supervisors were drafted and issued in English, Hindi and Urdu. No Manual for Enumerators was prepared as it was thought preferable to incorporate all instructions for them on the cover of the Enumeration Book.

I would like to emphasise here the importance of Codes, Manuals, etc., being as complete as possible without being subject to subsequent additions or corrections. For this reason, it is far better to concentrate on instructions for the formation of Census Divisions and house-numbering right up to say, October and when this has been thoroughly completed, to issue then, instructions as regards the filling in of the schedule. It is these latter which are constantly subject to correction and once instructions are issued it is very difficult in this large and scattered area to broadcast corrections or to be sure that any attention will be paid to them. Drafting and translating were on the whole fairly well done, but the work suffered somewhat from the lack of a clerk able to write Hindi neatly. In this widely spread Agency of various dialects it is essential that only the very simplest of words should be used in the vernacular. To give an example, the correct word for 'dependant' is, I am told, Mutalliqin but I discarded this in favour of Khanewala which was well-understood except by those who insisted that infants were Dudh pine walle. The translation of the heading for column 15 (Subsidiary language) was not good and caused a lot of misunderstanding which it was very difficult to rectify afterwards. On the whole, the less the enumerators and supervisors have to read, the better.

There is no Government Press in Rajputana and practically all printing of Manuals and Enumeration forms was done by the Newul Kishore Press, Lucknow, whose work and promptitude were admirable in every way. Some printing was done by local presses in Ajmer but I do not recommend this, as the proofs required a lot of correction. Household and Unemployment schedules were printed at Government Presses but they do not undertake distribution and are slow compared with the Newul Kishore Press.

Census Divisions.

2. As it had been the practice in the past to call for an Abstract of the General Village and Town Registers, it was again asked for, but I am very doubtful of its utility. It is nowhere laid down in the Imperial Code that it should be sent to the Superintendent's Office, and I recommend that it should be dispensed with in future. This General Register is the primary concern of each State and District and detailed instructions for its preparation should be the Superintendent's first duty as indicated in the first paragraph of this Chapter.

Experience gained at this Census shows that the Officer in charge of the work in large States such as Jaipur, Marwar, Mewar and Bikaner cannot be looked on as the equivalent of a District Census Officer in British India having direct relations with Charge Superintendents. It would be of advantage if such large States could be divided into two or more districts for Census purposes. Each district should be a group of Nizamats, Parganas, etc., and the District Census Officer would deal direct with Charge Superintendents in all matters. The Officer in charge of the operations in the whole State would have his headquarters at the Capital and would direct the policy and co-ordinate the work of the District Officers. Further, I would like to recommend that Census Divisions in a State should be geographical units so far as the formation of Charges, Circles and Blocks and House numbering and training of the staff are concerned. In some States it is the practice to treat the more important Thikanas as separate Charges. The disadvantage of this is that villages belonging to one Thikana are seldom contiguous and may be scattered over a vast area of the State, thereby rendering supervision in Census matters very difficult. A Tehsil, Pargana, etc., is a geographical unit and as it usually forms a Charge, should include within it all villages whether Khalsa or Thikana or any other form of tenure. If it is required for Abstraction purposes to keep figures for Thikanas separate, this can be done subsequently in the Abstraction Office by collecting together all the relevant enumeration books.

The Census of Ajmer City presented many difficulties and at the outset much apathy was encountered. I am glad to say however that the efforts of the District Census Officer and the appointment of the City Magistrate as Charge Superintendent plus the co-ordination of the Chairman of the Municipal Committee as supervising officer eventually put matters right. It will always be essential to ensure that timely arrangements are made in this large and increasing City and these remarks apply with equal force to Jaipur.

In accordance with the general principles laid down in the Imperial Code each Railway Station was treated as a Circle with the Station Master as Supervisor. This arrangement proved satisfactory as such a Circle can always increase the number of its Blocks according to whether it is necessary to have train or platform enumeration at the Stations concerned. Moreover Station Masters appreciate the greater status of Supervisors and direct communication with Charge Superintendents. Larger Railway Stations which were also settlements, such as Phulera, Bandikui, Gangapur and Abu Road, were formed into separate Charges, while in Ajmer the whole of the Railway area was made a separate Charge.

On the whole, Census Divisions were satisfactorily formed but some Charges were too large, notably Bikaner Tehsil and the Shekhawati and Torawati Nizamats in Jaipur State. In Bharatpur State and parts of Ajmer-Merwara Circles appeared to be too small but in the former each Circle represented a Patwari's circle and in the latter, owing to a lack of suitable Enumerators, the Supervisors had to do the bulk of the work and therefore, Circles were purposely kept small.

3. Instructions for House numbering were fully given in Chapter V of the Provincial Code and also in the Manual for Supervisors. No real difficulty was experienced in rural areas but I am of opinion that in very large villages containing more than one Census Circle, the series of numbers should run through the Circle and not through the whole village. The advantage of this will be explained later. In urban areas several difficulties were encountered. In dealing with a City or Town it is necessary that it should be divided into units corresponding with existing Administrative units which in large urban areas are usually known as Wards. Their boundaries are well known. For their further sub-division into Circles, the term Mohalla is often misleading, as a Mohalla frequently spreads over two Wards. Boundaries of Circles within each Ward should be well defined roadways and houses should be numbered serially throughout a Circle. As the Supervisor is the person responsible for house numbering within a Circle, it follows that once Circle boundaries are fixed he is free to commence his house numbering and preparation of House lists without having to wait for other Supervisors to do so, as would be the case if numbers ran serially throughout a Ward or very large village containing more than one Circle.

Several difficulties were encountered in Ajmer City in connection with the actual painting of the numbers on houses. Supervisors were for the most part not officials of the Municipality, and in future it would be an advantage if the Municipal Committee would definitely undertake this work and draw up a concise scheme for its completion by the appointed date.

The definition adopted for a house in rural areas was that laid down in the Imperial Code but in urban areas it was defined as "the dwelling place of one or more families with their resident dependants and servants, having a separate principal entrance from the common way, compound, enclosure, etc.". For each family within such a dwelling house a sub-number was allotted and the instructions were that these sub-numbers were not to be reckoned as separate houses for the purposes of the Provisional Totals. The reason for making this distinction between houses in urban and rural areas was to obtain figures for overcrowding in towns where such existed. The results however have not justified the procedure and I recommend for the future that the same definition should exist for a house in both towns and villages and that the use of sub-numbers should be discontinued.

In some large towns there was a reluctance to omit from numbering such shops wherein the owners never slept at night. Apparently it was feared that the total number of houses returned would so decrease as to lead people to think that the town was becoming deserted! It is not fully realised as yet that a Census of occupied houses is in reality a Census of families and that the figures obtained are the only possible data for a discussion on the size of families.

Special arrangements.

4. There were no Fairs of any magnitude on Census day on this occasion. Such gatherings as there were, were small and local in character. The Census of the only Cantonment, Nasirabad, presented no difficulties. The procedure laid down in Appendix II to the Imperial Code was simple and did not involve, as in 1921, the use of any special forms. I myself visited Nasirabad on two occasions and on the last gave a demonstration on the use of the various columns of the schedule. In spite of very clear instructions, however, one unit true to its ubiquitous reputation, insisted on mixing up families and other non-combatants with the strictly military population in the same Census books.

There was no change from the 1921 procedure for the Census of Railways. Many States however reported that it was not easy to secure the full co-operation of the Railway staff. Paragraph 2 of Appendix I to the Imperial Code laid down the 1st. September, 1930, as the latest date by which each Railway Company was to send in a list of Railway Stations and other Railway premises in each District or State. I suggest that this date should be an earlier one so as to permit of Railway particulars being received in time for inclusion in the first Charge Register which on this occasion had to be ready by the middle of July at the latest. The list of Railway premises, etc. could very suitably be communicated in the following form:—

STATE OR DISTRICT.

Location of building.	Description of building.	Number of inhabited houses.	Circle number assigned or Circle and Charge in which located.
1.	2.	3.	4.
Mile 371—4 . . .	Gate hut.	1
Mile 373—2 . . .	Gang hut.	6
Rampur Station . . .	Station Master's quarters, etc.	1

NOTE.—Specimen entries are shown and the last column would be filled in by the Civil authorities.

All Census forms and manuals containing instructions for the filling in of the Schedules were issued to the Railway authorities in ample time to permit of all concerned being aware of their duties. In addition, I held a meeting of all the Traffic Inspectors of the Metre Gauge Section of the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway and explained fully all the Rules. By reason of their ordinary duties these officials are in close touch with all the Station staff on the line and are in a position to disseminate information and instruction. In spite of these measures however books for platform and train enumeration were in many cases not well prepared and contained many vague entries particularly about birthplace and occupation. At Stations where platform and train enumeration is necessary, the extra staff required should be earmarked well beforehand and the Railway authorities should see that they are properly instructed in their duties.

The Preliminary record.

5. The Preliminary Enumeration was commenced everywhere on the 1st. January, 1931, and completed by the middle of February. The record was first of all prepared on rough paper and when passed as correct was copied neatly into the bound enumeration books. During this time all Census officials were directed to tour freely within their areas to test and correct entries.

6. The Actual Census began at 7 P. M. on the night of the 26th. February and was completed everywhere by midnight. Platform enumeration continued up to the departure of the last train on the night of the 26/27th. and train enumeration took place at convenient Stations early on the morning of the 27th. In towns where Congress interference was a possibility, the Enumerators only took with them the Rough paper schedules on their house to house visitation, the fair copies remaining in safe custody with the Supervisors. No interference however was encountered.

The Actual Census.

7. The only part of the Agency where the original procedure for enumeration was not followed was in 625 Bhil villages in Mewar. As these people still object to their houses being numbered, the Headman of each Pal was summoned to the nearest Thana and particulars regarding the population were taken from him.

Non-synchronous Areas.

8. The scheme for the collection of the Provisional Totals had been worked out well beforehand and all Telegraph Offices were instructed by the Director-General of Posts and Telegraphs to treat Census messages as "Priority". Full use was made of motors, lorries, Sowars and runners. The first totals to be received were from Banswara at 05.45 on the 27th. and the last from Jaisalmer at 0.55 on the 3rd. March. Mewar totals were received at 19.15 on the 2nd. March but the State omitted to telegraph them to the Census Commissioner. Luckily I was in Delhi on the 4th. March and discovered and was able to rectify this omission. Taking 6 A. M. on the 27th. February as the end of the Census for those States who had trains to enumerate and midnight on the 26th. in all other cases, the average time taken for Provisional Totals to reach me was 27 hours and 26 minutes—a very creditable performance considering the scattered nature of the country and comparative lack of communications.

The Provisional Totals.

9. The people by now were well accustomed to the meaning of a Census and all it involves. In some areas, notably urban ones, there was disinclination to receive Appointment Orders as unpaid Supervisors or Enumerators the work involved being stigmatised as Begar. On the whole, however, educated persons very loyally gave their services without question and a debt of gratitude is due to all such.

The attitude of the Public.

10. In Ajmer-Merwara 25 persons were prosecuted under various sections of the Act. Most of the States framed their own Acts and cases of prosecution occurred in Bharatpur, Shahpura and Nimrana.

Prosecutions
under the Act.

11. In my opinion the bugbears of this Census have been Industry, Bilingualism and the Unemployment Schedule. Among the vast body of unpaid enumerators that have of necessity to be employed there is always a large proportion that is incapable of understanding more than the very simplest instructions. To such as these an accurate completion of the column headed "Industry in which employed (for organised employees only)" together with the amplifying instructions presented insuperable difficulties. In the first place the heading as given above was very difficult to translate into the vernacular. Neither Karkhana, Tijarat nor Dastkari quite filled the bill as suitable words for what is understood by Industry. The imposition of a minimum number of employees to constitute an 'organised industry' was also another stumbling block and on the whole I, for one, breathed a sigh of relief when for motives of economy it was decided not to tabulate the results.

General remarks.

For this part of India at any rate, entries regarding a second language spoken in addition to Mother tongue, were not worth the trouble involved. To obtain an accurate record of Mother tongue only was difficult enough, as the average rustic when asked what language he spoke, generally felt rather insulted and replied as a rule "the same as every body else". It was then left to the poor Enumerator, primed with many instructions, to decide between such entries as Marwari and Jaipuri or Braj bhakha and Dangbhang according to the locality. Where an entry of a second language was obtained, it was usually for a literate person who recorded for instance Marwari as Mother tongue and Hindi as a subsidiary language which was of no value as a record of bilingualism such as I understand is found in the south and east of India, does not exist in Rajputana. We have no parallels for a man who talks say, Tamil in his home and Telegu when he goes to market because his village is situated in such a locality where this is necessary. We undoubtedly get Punjabi immigrants who talk Panjabi to their families and Hindi in the course of their daily avocations but this is because they are immigrants to a country where Panjabi is not understood and immigrants the world over have to acquire a working knowledge of the language of their new localities to get along at all.

The record of educated unemployment is fully discussed in the Report and I am of opinion that the incomplete nature of the enquiry is due more than anything else to the fact that it entailed a separate schedule which the staff, already overburdened with the general schedule, could not be bothered with.

To sum up, I am convinced that having regard to the fact that Census workers are unpaid they should not be called upon to collect any more than the most simple information pertaining to age, sex, civil condition, religion, caste, occupation, birthplace and literacy. A record of languages has been obtained so often in the past that it should not be necessary to obtain it at every census nor one of bilingualism ever again. An industrial census if required should be made the subject of special enquiry as was done in 1921 and infirmities ignored altogether. An enquiry involving the use of a special schedule such as pertained to educated unemployment should not form part of an ordinary census though it is difficult to suggest how the information desired by Government could suitably and accurately be obtained. If the nature of the enquiry is kept as simple as possible, it should be feasible to obtain a record of age, birthplace and employment more accurately than has been the case in the past.

CHAPTER II.

The Compilation of the results.

1. The post enumeration stages of the Census were, as in the past, Slip-copying, Sorting and Compilation. Formerly the usual practice in this Agency had been to have this work done at certain fixed centres as described in the Administrative Volumes for 1911 and 1921. In brief, the system was that each State Tabulating office under its own Deputy Superintendent should open at some convenient Centre. For instance, in 1921 the Jodhpur, Jaisalmer, Bikaner and Sirohi offices were located at Jodhpur but each as an independent unit and finding its own staff. The original scheme as recommended by Mr. (now Sir Herbert) Kealy was that the necessary staff including a Deputy Superintendent for each Centre should be engaged by him, the cost being pooled among the States concerned on a population basis, but as most of the larger States would not agree, the scheme was abandoned but the collection of State offices independent of each other at fixed centres remained.

General remarks.

I did not like this idea. It savoured too much of interference and was unpopular with the States who were, after all, paying the entire cost of the census of their own populations. I therefore put forward a proposal that each State should do its tabulation work at its own Capital but that Government should be asked to sanction the employment of three touring Inspectors, or rather, Advisers to ensure uniformity, accuracy and punctuality. This proposal met with the approval of the Darbars and the Hon'ble the Agent to the Governor General and was finally sanctioned by the Government of India. In my opinion the scheme was an entire success. The three selected officials were appointed on 1st. February, 1931 and spent a month in my office to receive a practical training in the processes of Slip-copying, Sorting and Compiling. After the census was taken, they proceeded to their several spheres of operations.

These were as follows:—

No. 1.	No. 2.	No. 3.
Udaipur.	Bharatpur.	Jodhpur.
Shahpura.	Karauli.	Bikaner.
Partabgarh.	Kotah.	Jaisalmer.
Banswara.	Bundi.	Sirohi.
Kushalgarh.	Jhalawar.	Kishangarh.
Dungarpur.	Dholpur.	Jaipur.
	Alwar.	Tonk.
		Lawa.

The first named place in each State was treated as Headquarters and throughout the period of abstraction each Inspector visited each State in his Circle at least once a month. By these means the State offices received the assistance and guidance they were frequently in need of and uniformity and punctuality were as far as possible observed. The Darbars appreciated not having to move their offices from the Capitals as no difficulties were encountered in the matter of accommodation or the engagement of the necessary staff. On all grounds therefore I recommend that this system be tried again at the next Census.

2. A new procedure for preparing the individual slips was tried at this Census in the Khalsa rural areas of Ajmer-Merwara and in Marwar, Bharatpur, Kishangarh and Dholpur States with a certain amount of success. This was to issue the slips during the preliminary enumeration and to have them copied by the Supervisors. After the Census was taken, slips were prepared for entries made at the final enumeration and books and slips despatched to the Tabulation office concerned. The advantage claimed was a saving of time but against this must be set the lack of supervision and the necessity for checking entries after the slips had been received in the Tabulation offices. Considering that Slip-copying had finished everywhere by 25th. April, 1931, I am not prepared to recommend the system for general adoption. Each State should be allowed to choose the method best suited to local conditions but supervision is necessary and must be assured.

It was laid down in the Imperial Code, Chapter II, paragraph 19, that the gang Supervisor or his assistant should write up Register A which is prepared concurrently with the copying of slips. This however tends to delay Copyists who are waiting to have their books and slips checked and it was therefore found to be a better plan to have a special staff whose duty it was to sort the slips for each book by sex and religion and then enter up Register A, thus setting free the gang Supervisors for checking the work of their Copyists. I also make the following recommendations for the future:—

- (a) The Officer selected in each of the larger States for the appointment of Deputy Superintendent in charge of the Tabulation office should be appointed before the final enumeration so that he may start organising his office to ensure the commencement of work as soon as possible after the Enumeration books are received.
- (b) The first four columns of Register A should be entered from Circle lists before slip-copying starts.

Sorting and Compilation.

3. Sorters tickets were issued in English and in Hindi and on the reverse of each were instructions for the guidance of Sorters. I am however very doubtful as to the necessity of these instructions in the vernacular, and am of opinion that the less Sorters have to assimilate written instructions the better. Such instructions moreover tend to produce the idea that the supervising staff are thereby relieved of their responsibility for the proper sorting of each Table. The best work is obtained by good, practical demonstration before each Table is taken in hand and the expense incurred in translating and printing instructions in vernacular on the back of each Sorters ticket is thereby obviated.

It was laid down in the Imperial Code that in the case of those Tables wherein actual ages had to be adjusted to quinary age-groups, duplicate Sorters tickets for testing purposes were to be sent to my office. When economy became the order of the day, these were dispensed with and I am of opinion that the responsibility of each State for the work for which it is paying plus the supervision and check effected by the Touring Government Inspectors is sufficient in the interests of accuracy, and that duplicate Sorters Tickets should not be called for in future except in special cases or for test of accuracy. Imperial Tables I, II, III, IV, V, IX, XVI and Provincial Table I were not compiled from Sorters Tickets and were received by 14th. May, 1931. For the remaining Tables sorting and compilation went on side by side and the last Table to be received was Table X from Ajmer-Merwara on 25th. August, 1931.

In the Tables Volume of every Census Report the pages are numbered serially and the order and designation of Tables is laid down by the Government of India. Now it stands to reason that some Tables are ready for the Press before others and not necessarily in the sequence of their serial order. For instance, Table XVI (Religion) was ready months before Table X (Occupation) but the former could not be sent for printing except in its serial order on account of the necessity for the serial numbering of pages. It seems to me that a considerable saving of time and therefore of money could be effected if the numbering of pages in the Tables Volume was dispensed with. Supposing that one wanted to extract information concerning the civil condition of the people, the index would show that the Table concerned was numbered VII and it does not require the serial numbering of pages to find Table VII situated as it would be after V and VI and before VIII and IX. There is much in this suggestion for the consideration of the next Superintendent and I earnestly invite his attention to it.

Report writing.

4. Owing to a curtailment in the number of Tables to be prepared the three Touring Inspectors were called in to Headquarters as soon as the Tables for the States in their Circles had been received, and I then utilised them for the remaining period of their engagement to assist me in preparing the various Subsidiary Tables required for each Chapter of the Reports. By this arrangement I was able to commence writing the Reports on the 1st. September, 1931.

I am glad to say that sanction had been accorded to a return to the previous practice of having separate Reports for Ajmer-Merwara and for the Rajputana Agency. This arrangement enabled each volume to be a combined one of Report and Tables and from every point of view was satisfactory.

CHAPTER III.

Expenditure.

1. The rules for the maintenance of Census accounts were published in Chapter II of the Imperial Census Code, Part I, and were on the whole far simpler than those laid down on previous occasions. There were no such distinctions as 'Departmental Accounts' and 'Treasury Accounts' and all expenditure was debited to a Central head—"37.—Miscellaneous Department—Census".

System of Accounts.

2. The cost of conducting a Census in this Agency is not strictly comparable with that of British Provinces or single States for the reason that, apart from the smaller Province of Ajmer-Merwara and the leased area of Mount Abu, the States paid for the entire cost of the operations within their own boundaries and it was optional for each State to issue for its own purposes its own separate Report and Tables. The actual cost to Government was therefore confined to the maintenance of my supervising and co-ordinating office, the cost of operations in Ajmer-Merwara and in Mount Abu, and the printing of two combined volumes of Reports and Tables.

The Expenditure.

As far as can be foreseen at the time of going to Press the expenditure on this occasion amounts to Rs. 1,25,152 after deducting contributions from Municipalities in Ajmer-Merwara and Abu, recoveries from States on account of forms supplied and a few miscellaneous recoveries. The corresponding total in 1921 was Rs. 1,11,529. The increase is entirely due to the difference between my salary and that of my predecessor in 1921. This difference amounts to Rs. 22,094, so that, apart from these salaries, the cost has not been as high as it was in 1921. The incidence per head of the population of the Agency and Ajmer-Merwara combined is 2'04 pies as compared with 2'07 and 1'87 pies in 1921 and 1911 respectively. There is however another aspect that, in my opinion, should be considered when assessing the cost of conducting a Census. Not only should the cost to Government be considered but also the cost to the States without whose ready cooperation no Census would be possible. In all States and especially in the larger ones, a whole time Superintendent had to be appointed and in some instances, as in Marwar, the subordinate enumerating staff had to be paid. These are among other items of expenditure that do not occur in British India. The statement overleaf shows that the average expenditure from State finances up to the rendering of the last State Table to my office was Rs. 25.2.10 per 1,000 of population as compared with Rs. 26.11.3 in 1921. If to this is added the expenditure incurred by Government and British Indian Municipalities the total cost may be assessed as Rs. 35.1.0 per 1,000 of population and was Rs. 36.6.11 at the Census of 1921.

Comparative Statement showing the cost incurred by each State, etc., in 1931 and 1921 per 1,000 of its population from the commencement of the Census Operations to the rendering of the last Table.

The statements appended to this Chapter show the items of expenditure in detail.

Printing.

3. There remains one point connected with expenditure which will have to be seriously considered by my successor during the first year's operations at the next Census. This concerns the printing of the Report and Tables. I was given to understand that the Delhi branch of the Government of India Press would undertake this work but at the eleventh hour they notified their inability to do so, and instead, a contract was placed by the Deputy Controller of Printing with the Saraswati Press at Meerut. The arrangement was far from satisfactory for however well they may be equipped for ordinary printing work the style and get up of the two volumes is not of the high standard that one usually finds in Census literature. I do not altogether blame the Press for they were taxed beyond their resources. At the same time, however, the necessity for the issue of such a long list of corrections as is shown in the beginning of the Report Volumes was within the means of the Press to combat, especially as most of the errors did not appear on the finally corrected proofs. Time is as great an economy as cheaper rates and had I been allowed to entrust the work to a firm of repute such as the 'Times of India' Press in Bombay whose Baroda Census Report will surely serve as a model of how such Reports should be efficiently and expeditiously printed, the saving in time and in consequence the cost of keeping my office open, would have adequately compensated for the higher printing charges involved.
